DEATH AT HIS ANVIL.
The blacksmith is usually looked upon as the ideal of robust health. This is frequently the case, but nevertheless he is subject to the same ailments that afflict other men, and owing to the arduous nature of his daily toil, the results of bilious attacks or indigestion are likely to be even more serious and speedy than in the case of men who lead sedentary lives. The harder a man works, whether at the anvil or bench or plow handle, the more important is the necessity for a careful watchfulness over health.

When a hardworking man finds that his liver is torpid or his digestion bad, he can save himself much discomfort, and possibly a serious sickness, by resorting at once to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The man who does this will always go to his work and come from it, whistling. A wife or mother can be of great aid in this respect. Hard working men are prone to disregard little disorders and let them run on. The good wife should see to it that there is always a bottle of "Golden Medical Discovery" in the house, and that it is used when needed. An honest dealer won't advise a substitute.

About four years ago I was greatly afflicted with torpid liver," writes Miss Nellie Doyle, of Pasadena, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y. "A half dozen bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery made me a new woman. I truly believe your remedy saved my life. I am having good health, and can do all my own housework."

For a paper-covered copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, send one-cent stamps, to cover cost of mailing only, to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y. Cloth binding, 50 cents extra.

Miss Rachel A. Jones, of Thomaston, Rankin Co., Miss., writes: "Your wonderful Medical Adviser is worth more than its weight in gold. I do not see how you can give such a volume away. I have been offered $250 for it, but I would not part with it for five dollars."

[COMMUNICATED.]

A GHASTLY HUMAN FACE.

It is curious how in looking back upon some stirring and exciting scenes as a great battle the mind will fasten upon some event of a comparatively unimportant nature, which seems to have photographed itself upon the memory. There are always fearful sights on the battle field, but the one that I will recall was so fantastically horrible as almost to reach the grotesque.

It was on a Saturday evening that Jackson drove in and turned the right flank of the Yankee army at Chancellorsville. The next morning, Sunday, the great pitched battle was fought around the little hamlet of that name. It was here the enemy concentrated and with their great army, fought gallantly. Our army was divided into two wings, the right commanded by General Robert E. Lee, the left by General Stuart. The battle raged for hours, ebbing and flowing with varied success. The weather was intensely hot and the woods were so parched and dry that the exploding shells and the flames spreading over the ground reached the wounded and added to all the din of battle were the shrieks and cries of these poor fellows perishing in the fire. So if ever there was a hell on earth it was right there then. Toward noon the two wings of our army commenced to close in upon that of the enemy, slowly driving them back. Gen. Stuart ordered an advance now of his entire line.

The smoke from the burning wood and the battle hung overhead like a black pall, and the atmosphere had a lurid light. Our long artillery column moved down the broad road and over ground where there had been desperate fighting. I noticed that the ponderous artillery wheels, and hoofs of the horses were passing over and trampling upon some dark object in the road. It proved to be the headless body of a federal soldier mashed to a pulp. A little farther on was the face, a ghastly sight. A cannon ball had carried away the back of the head, and then by eyes wide open staring up at us as we filed by. I had to rein in my horse to prevent his trampling upon it. It made the cold chills run through me as I passed, and to this time, when my memory goes back to that tragic day, I fancy I see that awful face.

We halted at the foot of the plateau leading up to the Chancellor house from whence the enemy had been driven by our infantry, and just here happened a sad incident. There was in our company a soldier who when the war came on was a student of divinity at the Episcopal Seminary. He was considerably older than myself but we had contracted a friendship. And he used to tell me how bitterly he deplored the interruption of his chosen career, and how distasteful to him was the life and surroundings of a soldier, though he was conscientious and brave enough. I remember I would wonder with a mild contempt that a man should prefer to be a preacher rather than a soldier. Now I think the preacher had the best of it.

Well, I was sitting on my horse as my post when H———, approaching me and calling me by name, inquired whether I had any bread in my haversack. I replied in the negative, and, turning, congratulated him upon coming out of the battle safely. Just then the enemy, who had been suddenly falling back, opened fire with one of their batteries. A shell exploded above us and a piece came down like a flash of light and struck H——— upon the head. He fell forward, dead, upon his face. The litter bearers ran up and bore him off to the rear, and we never saw him more. But I knew his spirit winged itself straight to that peace he so loved and longed for.

We moved up on the plateau now. And what a warlike scene was there. Our infantry were in dense array. The artillery came up until all the available space was packed with the brass and iron "dogs of war." Our great leaders were there also. The majestic Lee, the dashing Stuart, Generals Rodas and Harry Heth, and our own Colonel Lindsay Walker, on his great black horse, the finest looking officer in the army. The ground was filled with the dead federal, and the wounded were crawling about seeking any shelter from the scorching rays of the sun, begging for water with the dreadful thirst that always attacks the wounded on the field of battle. Some of us filled our canteens with water and did what little we could to alleviate the suffering, until the bugles called us again to our duties.

ELIZABETH N. J., Oct. 19, 1896.
ELLY BROS. Dear Sirs:—Please accept my thanks for your favor in the gift of a bottle of Cream Balm. Let me say I have used it for years and can thoroughly recommend it for what it claims, if directions are followed.

Robbed the Grave.
A startling incident of which Mr John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters,' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of a victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents per bottle at E. L. Allen's Drug Store.

THE GAZETTE FOR 1898—The Alexandria Gazette, as it has been doing for years, receives the full Associated Press dispatches from all over the world, and is the only paper published between Washington and Richmond that has a telegraph service. It publishes the latest news, especially with reference to this section of the State; daily reports of Congressional and Legislative proceedings; also full market reports. The daily edition is sent to any part of the city or country for 10 cents per week, and the tri-weekly edition for 25 cents per month.

TO MERCHANTS—The holiday trade is fast approaching and shoppers are already busying themselves as to what and where to buy. Of course they have recourse to the columns of the Gazette as a guide, and those merchants, keep the public advised as to what they have to sell usually reap the reward. No better advertising medium than the Gazette can be had. It is universally read in this city and in the counties whose people trade in Alexandria and those people have for generations consulted its columns for information of all kinds.

After hearing some friends continually praising Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, Curtis Fleck, of Anaheim, California, purchased a bottle of it for his own use and is now as enthusiastic over its wonderful work as anyone can be. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by J. H. Janney, Druggist, 701 King street.

It is easy to catch a cold and just as easy to get rid of it if you commence early to use One Minute Cough Cure. It cures coughs, colds, bronchitis, pneumonia and all throat and lung troubles. It is pleasant to take, safe to use and sure to cure. Charles G. Lennon.

Sweet and Dry Catawba (Bright Canary Color) $1 per gallon.
EGG NOG—still holds its place as the favorite Christmas brew. One gallon of excellent quality can be made from the following proportions: Ten eggs, one and one-half pints of whiskey, one-half pint of rum, three quarts of milk and one-half pound of powdered sugar. Break the eggs and separate the whites from the yolks; beat the yolks until they are light, add the powdered sugar and thoroughly disperse; now pour in the liquor slowly, constantly stirring the while; then let it stand a minute so that the liquor will cook the eggs; turn in the milk gradually, still stirring, and last of all incorporate the whites whipped to a stiff froth. It bottles well, cooled and placed in a cool place it will keep for a month in prime condition. When serving sprinkle a little grated nutmeg over the top of each glass.
